

PAILAN WORLD SCHOOL

Principal: Ken Jarman

Friday, 20 November, 2009

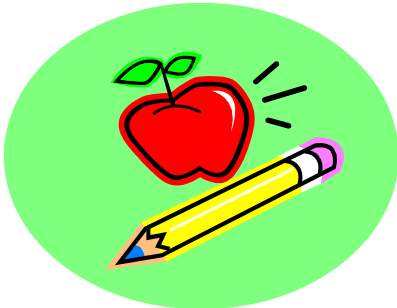

They are Here!

International Teachers Arrive Workshops

At 12:45 am on Saturday, 14th November, our fifteen international teachers arrived at Kolkata International Airport.

Coming from the world renowned University of New England, our visitors immediately noticed the difference in climate when stepping into the hot, muggy Kolkata night. Despite the eighteen-hour flight, our visitors were cheerful and buzzing in anticipation of the four weeks at Pailan World School.

During their stay, the internationals will be working in our Junior School, teaching

A caption describing the graphic alongside our teachers. Because the visitors are working in pairs, this will mean that our junior classes will have three teachers in the classroom at all times for one month.

The visitors will be demonstrating interesting and exciting methods of teaching and exchanging ideas with our Junior School staff. Can you imagine the advantages for the children? Each child will be able to enjoy challenging and informative lessons and additionally, have three teachers able to provide individual help and support.

Every Wednesday afternoon, the international teachers will conduct a workshop for the teachers of Pailan World School. Complimenting that, PWS teachers and our visitors will exchange ideas for the whole of the time that the visitors are here. This international exchange of information and techniques can only benefit our children.

Invitation Workshop

On Saturday, 12th December, the international visitors will be conducting a workshop for all primary teachers and administrators throughout Kolkata, free of charge.

Essentially the workshop will focus on the development of language in the primary school, spelling techniques and De Bono's 'Six Thinking Hats'

Leading the workshop will be Yvonne Maters, Director of Professional Experiences at the world famous University of New England.

Workshop for Parents

Our International Teachers will be conducting a workshop for parents on Saturday, 28th November at Pailan World School. In the workshop, parents will meet our international visitors, and learn about the advantages of global education.

All parents are invited to the workshop which will commence at 9:00 am.